An activist investor takes aim at bid for Samsung

NEIL GOUGH
Hong Kong, 4 June

Elliott Management, the activist hedge fund run by Paul E Singer, is taking on the Samsung Group in South Korea.

On Thursday, Elliott announced that it had acquired a stake of 7 per cent in Samsung C&T, a construction and industrial investment company that is currently the target of a takeover bid by Cheil Industries, another South Korean company that effectively serves as the Samsung Group's main holding company for its sprawling network of businesses.

Elliott, which has $26 billion in assets under management, said in a statement on Thursday that Cheil's all-shares takeover offer "significantly undervalues Samsung C&T and that the terms are neither fair to nor in the best interests of Samsung C&T's shareholders."

In a separate regulatory filing in Seoul, Elliott said it had bought the shares "for the purpose of participating in management" of the company.

Cheil announced an $8 billion buyout bid last month for Samsung C&T, which holds a significant stake in the Samsung Group's flagship subsidiary, Samsung Electronics.

The Samsung Group involves a complex network of dozens of companies, and analysts described Cheil's offer as an important step in an ongoing process designed to cement the position of the group's heir-apparent, Jay Y Lee, who is vice chairman of Samsung Electronics. Lee's father and the patriarch of the Samsung Group, Lee Kun-hee, has been ailing since he was hospitalised last May after a heart attack.

Elliott's move suggests that Cheil's bid for Samsung C&T will not go unchallenged. It is a rare glimpse of investor activism in a region where such campaigns are seldom seen and have met with mixed results in the past. The biggest companies in Asian markets where foreign investors are most active — Japan, South Korea, Hong Kong and Singapore — are also often family controlled, meaning outsiders have a harder time influencing management decisions.

Last year, Elliott had built up a small stake in the Bank of East Asia, one of Hong Kong's biggest local banks, which is controlled by the family of David Li. But its stake was diluted after the bank sold new shares to Sumitomo Mitsui Financial Group of Japan. Elliott sought to challenge the decision, which some analysts described as a defensive move by the Li family, and that matter is working its way through the courts in Hong Kong.

Merkel says Greek debt talks far from conclusion

The end is not in sight in negotiations between Greece and its international lenders on a cash-for-reforms deal, German Chancellor Angela Merkel said on Thursday.

"The talks are far from reaching a conclusion," Merkel said during a news conference in Meseberg north of Berlin. Greece is running out of cash and its lenders, the euro zone and the International Monetary Fund, have yet to come to an agreement. The Greek finance ministry on Thursday asked them to quickly come up with more "realistic" proposals than the one offered to PM Alexis Tsipras on Wednesday. REUTERS
